About MACRO 2015

This is a biannual international symposium on Polymer Science and Technology held in India under the umbrella of The Society of Polymer Science, India (SPSI- www.spsi.co.in) which will commence twenty fifth year of its journey in January 2015. This meeting of the series marks the silver jubilee celebration of SPSI and it will be organized jointly by the Kolkata and Kharagpur chapters of SPSI to be held on 23-26 January, 2015 at the Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science (IACS- www.iacs.res.in), Kolkata, India.

IACS is the oldest scientific research institute in India devoted to practice basic science in Physics, Chemistry and Biology. It was founded on 1876, much before independence came to the country, by a medical professional Dr. Mahendra Lal Sircar. This is the place where Professor C V Raman worked (1907-1933) for his pioneering discovery of Raman Effect for which he was awarded the Nobel Prize in Physics in 1930. Prof. Meghnath Saha and Prof. S. N. Bose were also associated in different capacities with this premier institute of the country. The polymer research in India was first started at IACS in 1950 under the leadership of Prof. S. R. Palit. Since then, IACS is a vibrant place of polymer research in India.

Theme

The MACRO2015 will cover the following broad range of contemporary research topics on polymer science and technology:

- Polymer Synthesis
- Supramolecular Polymers & Self Assembly
- Polymer Blends & Composites
- Polymers in Energy Applications, Sensors
- Sustainable Polymers & Biological Applications
- Conducting Polymers
- Polymeric Nanomaterials
- Elastomers & Rubbers

The meeting will comprise of keynote lecture, several plenary talks and invited talks by many leading polymer scientists around the globe. There will also be few oral presentations and an extensive poster presentation session by young graduate and postdoctoral students.
